After a rare gap of five years without a novel, Doris Lessing burst forth with Shikasta, which she announced was the first in a series called Canopus in Argos: Archives, and in the next four years she published the other four books in the series. A number of loyal readers were disappointed with what Lessing called her "space fiction," with its undeveloped, stylized characters and strangely unexciting interplanetary rivalries.

Lessing turned to science fiction in a five-novel sequence titled Canopus in Argos: Archives (1979-83). The novels The Diary of a Good Neighbour (1983) and If the Old Could... (1984) were published pseudonymously under the name Jane Somers to dramatize the problems of unknown writers.

Doris Lessing | British writer | Britannica
In an era when science fiction insists on "showing" rather than "telling", Doris Lessing's Canopus in Argos: Archives series challenges readers to think differently. In five books, starting with Shikasta in 1979, she produced an epic scale work more in the vein of Olaf Stapledon's universal histories than current best-sellers, and no less dazzling and thought-provoking.

Doris Lessing: Shikasta - SciFI Mind
Lessing has created a universe with three interstellar empires, Canopus, Sirius and Putteria. Canopus is advanced and spiritual - their approach to the universe is in terms of stewardship and alignment, intervening where necessary, and by any means, to maintain universal harmony.
