I was excited to read this novel Faith and Fire by James Swallow as I've never read a Sister of Battle novel before. It's a side of 40k that has never appealed to me over the years. The idea of the Church, in general, is something I have a distrust in so the idea of the fanatical 40k world and warrior nuns just didn't sit well.

Faith and Fire follows Sister of Battle Celestian Miriya of Our Martyred Lady and her squad from transferring a psyker prisoner, to the intrigue of the Ecclesiarchy. James Swallow has his work cut out for him; for one, there's not a ton of lore to draw from, unlike the Horus Heresy or any Space Marine chapter.

Sadly, Faith & Fire is hit or miss in this area. To his credit, Swallow does a fantastic job presenting the hierarchy and ritual of the Sisters of the Order of the Martyred Lady. We are privy to their daily and more mundane rituals, as well as more rarefied rituals (like the death ritual, induction into the Repentia).
