I'm not usually one to read Non-Fiction, especially memoirs. I just really don't find them interesting. I am so glad that I decided to step outside of my reading comfort zone and give The Last Blind Date a chance. I loved this book. It was full of humor, honesty, and insight. From the first page, I couldn't put it down and devoured it.

The Last Blind Date by Linda Yellin - Goodreads

This is one of those tips that just helps alleviate (some of) the stress of a date so you can get back to the more important pre-date rituals like that glass of rosé. Pick a good spot. Personally, I am very adamant about getting drinks (not dinner!) on blind dates.
