The non-canonical books referenced in the Bible includes pseudepigrapha, writings from Hellenistic and other non-Biblical cultures, and lost works of known or unknown status. By the "Bible" is meant those books recognised by most Christians and Jews as being part of Old Testament as well as those recognised by Christians alone as being part of the Biblical apocrypha or of the Deuterocanon. It may also include books of the Anagignoskomena that are accepted only by Eastern Orthodox Christians. For

Some Jewish writings were even originally in Greek and did not have to be translated. This includes books such as Judith, Tobit, Wisdom, Ecclesiasticus and others. To make the situation a bit more confusing, the Jews did not have the identical concept of inspiration that we in the West are used to.

Noncanonical writings are early Christian documents that are not found in the New Testament. The list of writings in the New Testament are known as a canon, a term that comes from a word meaning "measuring stick" or "rod." There are many different canons in different religious and even literary traditions; whatever list of writings a particular community considers authoritative ...

And the Talmud is the most racist, hate-mongering, blasphemous book the world has ever known, according to the Real Jew News (www.realjewnews.com). The Talmud was written in Hebrew between the 3rd & 6th Centuries as a codification of the so-called Oral Law that the Jewish rabbis claim was handed down from Moses.
