The phrase “this is not a drill” is sometimes used similarly. A “drill” is a kind of practice, like a fire drill used for people to practice evacuation routes from a building in case of a real fire. “This is not a test/drill” might also be used to get you to pay more attention to a piece of information.

“This is a (not) a test”: Here's What It Really Means

The Lord’s wrath will not turn back until he has done and achieved his purpose. In the final days, you will understand this clearly. (Jeremiah 23:19-20; The Revised New Jerusalem Bible, Study Edition [Henry Wansbrough, Random House]) Well, this is the time to “understand” that what is unfolding now is “not a test.”
